WHAT WE THINK

on the month's news

No Peace in Vietnam

What a farce is presented by the pained surprise of Western liberals at the breakdown of peace in Vietnam! Anyone with a wit to rub against another should have known that for the Communists the truce talks in Paris were just a propaganda exercise and a means of disarming the Americans. We ourselves predicted that the Reds would open up the war again just as soon as it suited them.

This has been confirmed by American military intelligence from documents captured earlier this year from the North Vietnamese. These documents gave a timetable for Communist action following the signing of the truce.

First: Communist operatives throughout South Vietnam were instructed that headquarters would not communicate with them for five months, precisely, after the accords were signed; they were to rely exclusively on previously issued orders.

Second: The Communist units in the South were instructed to institute on their own initiative acts of terrorism, assassinations, demonstrations and resistance aimed at destroying confidence in the South Vietnamese Government and to prepare for widespread operations scheduled for approximately July 1st, 1973.

Third: Communist cadres were instructed to foment incidents which would make it appear that it is the Saigon Government which is breaking the peace agreements.

Fourth: Demonstrations centred around genuine grievances were to be organised with older men and women in the forefront. Later the demonstrators would include skilled and armed Communists.

Fifth: Major action will take place after July 1st, 1973.

Phony Protest

What lies behind the massive protest by the Australian and New Zealand governments against French nuclear tests in the Pacific? Is it really concern for the danger of radio-active fall-out or is it something else?

We are not scientists and do not therefore attempt to comment whether fall-out does in this case represent an environmental hazard or not. What we can say with certainty is that even if it didn't and the two governments knew that it didn't their song and dance about the matter would be undiminished.

Both governments concerned are governments of the far left, and to the left there is no greater crime imaginable than for nations outside the favoured circle of 'super-powers' (i.e. powers acting as the faithful agents of the world's secret government) taking it upon themselves to possess an independent nuclear force. For the purposes of those shaping the future of the world to their own ends, nuclear sovereignty on the part of a country like France is a heresy just as it is on the part of a nation like Britain. Nations with their own nuclear bombs might be tempted in some future contingency to act independently in the defence of their own interests instead of allowing themselves to be coerced into following the internationalist, pro-communist UNO line. Independent nuclear forces therefore are opposed with vigour and with passion.

Radio-active fall-out may well be a danger to be watched; what is a much greater danger is for a nation that values its freedom to leave itself without the weapons to defend it. It seems that the French recognise this; so should we.

Not Mindless

Everything that has been said in the papers about the vicious assault on Professor Hans Eysenck at the London School of Economics we can agree with — except for one word and that is the word 'mindless'.

The Professor courted the hatred of the left by stating that the scientific facts confirm that there is an inequality in intelligence between white and black races. After a skirmish at Birmingham University, he was attacked and bloodied up by a left-wing mob at the LSE. All the country was shocked, and the press described the attackers as 'mindless thugs'.

The thugs, however, achieved the purpose of their attack; they stopped Eysenck from speaking and obtained from him an admission that he did not relish the prospect of speaking again at any seat of learning on race inequality. They have achieved similar results in universities all over the country, threatening blue murder if any speakers were allowed a platform whose views they opposed. Several instances have occurred of National Front speakers having their invitations to speak at universities and colleges cancelled after threats of violence from the left. Neither the threats nor the cancellations have been popular with the majority, but they have nevertheless been effective.

The left knows in fact that our tired bourgeois society will do anything rather than have trouble. It will capitulate to any kind of nastiness provided it is nasty and threatening enough. When the old order is decadent and gutless, violence and intimidation against it always pay off.

Free speech will one day be restored at our universities, but not by the victory of 'reason', not by the 'persuasion' of the left to allow it. It will only be restored when those who value it back their faith up with the strong arm of self-defence, when left-wing hooligans know that their efforts to suppress people by force will end up by them themselves being carried off the premises with black eyes and broken ribs.

EYSENCK

Victim of calculated thuggery

In the present situation pertaining at universities this does not happen and the left knows it will not happen. The left's hooliganism is far from 'mindless'; it is calculated. The left calculates correctly the cowardice of 'moderate' students and of established authority.

Selective Racism

We hear that the Synagogue Council of America is determined to stop broadcasting of a new TV show called "Bridget Loves Bernie" because of its comedy treatment of the difficulties that result from the marriage of Bridget, an Irish Catholic, and Bernie, a Jew.

"Intermarriage waters down the stock," said Rabbi Balfour Brickner, chairman of the Council's committee on films and broadcasting. "It's a threat to the survival of the Jewish Community."

We can see the Rabbi's point. TV programmes that serve to break down racial integrity are a menace and should be opposed. Full marks to America's Jews if they are opposed to any such programmes, and full marks to them for making an organised protest against them.

Isn't it strange though that when any White Gentile ethnic group makes the same protest it is immediately greeted with vituperative shouts of 'racism' and 'Nazism' on the part of the mass media, with some of the loudest shouting of all coming from the kith and kin of Rabbi Brickner.

Why is racial integrity and self-defence a right extended to some peoples and not to others? Will someone tell us, because we would love to know.

Hushing Up History

A proposal to build a London memorial to the 14,500 Polish officers and men massacred in cold blood by the Russians at Katyn in 1940 has been held up by the Church of England.

For more than two years the men seeking to set up this memorial to Britain's wartime Polish allies have been subjected to every kind of opposition.

The Foreign Office tried to talk them out of it on the grounds that the massacre should be forgotten in the interests of Anglo-Soviet relations.

When this failed the FO then urged that at least the date of the incident should be omitted from the inscription so that people reading it would assume that the Poles were murdered by the Germans, who at the time were not in that part of Poland.

Having surmounted the Foreign Office hurdle, the sponsors then met opposition from several borough councils. At last the Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea agreed to find a site for the memorial on consecrated ground in St. Lukes Gardens, Chelsea, and gave planning permission for it to be set up.

Now the London Diocesan Advisory Committee has turned the project down for the most ridiculous reasons. First it claims that the disturbance to existing tombs in erecting the monument might distress local residents, though nobody has been buried there for nearly 100 years.

Secondly, it suggests that erecting the monument is not in keeping with the Church's principle of reconciliation.

This little episode should serve as a sinister token of the fantastic extent to which our institutions are infiltrated by people who, if not committed communists themselves, are certainly prepared to play the communist game by whitewashing the blood-stained Soviet regime.

The time has surely come for the emergence of a British Senator McCarthy to expose and purge communists and their lackeys from positions in church and politics as well as everywhere else.

The Final Testimonial

Some years ago your Editor had his attention drawn to Time and Tide, which was by repute a right-wing and patriotic monthly. He decided to give it a try by taking out a subscription.

After a year of reading mainly wishy-washy liberal articles, he gave the magazine up in disgust and left renewal appeals unanswered. Behind all its flag-waving, Time and Tide had turned out to be no different from the rest of the junk emanating from the mass media lie factory. As a source of enlightenment on what is happening in the world, it was decidedly inferior to the Morning Star and Socialist Worker.

The other day there came into our hands a copy of a brochure advertising Time and Tide and begging for subscriptions. In it were testimonials from various public figures, presumably thought to add to its prestige. Among these were Lord Thomson, Rupert Murdoch and Mr. Edmund de Rothschild.

A pity that the same brochure was not circulating around years ago. Had your Editor known that Time and Tide was approved in Rothschild quarters, he might have saved himself a pound of two. At least we now pass on the tip to others for what it's worth!

Watergate

Last month Spearhead declined to comment on the much publicised 'Watergate' affair. One reason was that it is an American internal matter and there is something positively repulsive about the way in which British newspapers and periodicals nowadays grab hold of every domestic issue in the United States and cogitate on it at length as if it were of great interest and great concern to the British public.

The other reason was that we felt that there was more to the affair than met the eye, and that if there were aspects of it that had international reverberations these had yet to be disclosed. It did not seem that the decision to 'bug' the Democratic Party headquarters could be explained purely by considerations of electoral advantage, as was at first claimed. It seemed prudent to wait for further developments before passing comment.

The full facts of the affair still have not of course come to light, but a most fascinating — and by no means incredible — theory about it was supplied by Chapman Pincher in the Daily Express on May 18th.

Mr. Pincher reported a story going the rounds in US intelligence circles that Nixon aides initiated the bugging and burglary of the Democratic headquarters as a result of information that the party had received a secret donation from the Cuban Government at the prompting of certain elements in the Kremlin.

It was considered that if these facts got out it would prove highly detrimental to Nixon's policy of 'detente' with Moscow, and that therefore they ought to be hushed up, even at the cost of great political embarrassment to the Nixon Government.

While no proof has yet come to light as to the truth of this story, there is a certain logic in it that is lacking in other theories as to the origins of the Watergate scandal. The past quarter-century is riddled with instances of facts relating to the international communist conspiracy being suppressed by influentially placed people close to the centre of power in the United States and indeed other Western nations. Earlier in this column we have related how Communism's secret allies in Britain have managed to obstruct the building of a memorial that reminds the world of Soviet atrocities.

It is an interesting fact that Pincher's information has not been mentioned in any of the other major papers.

EXPLODED - THE MYTH THAT WE NEED IMMIGRANT DOCTORS

THE apologists for coloured and foreign immigration into Britain have a favourite argument when all others are exhausted: it is that certain vital industries and public services depend on immigrants for their functioning. This argument is in the long run specious, for no industry or service permits a vacuum indefinitely; if there is a shortage of labour, conditions simply have to change to attract that labour. All the industries and services now being run largely by immigrants were run in the past without them.

One service frequently quoted as depending on immigrants is the National Health Service, and there is no doubt that today an enormously high proportion of workers in the NHS are immigrants. Did this have to be so? Would we have no adequate health service today but for immigrant doctors? A report in the Daily Telegraph Colour Supplement on May 4th has cast some revealing light on this question.

The report begins by stating that while one third of hospital doctors in Britain come from abroad medical schools here are having to turn away an alarmingly high percentage of prospective British doctors.

To give an example, Manchester's new £12,000,000 medical school receives far more applicants for places from British-born would-be medical students each year than it can make available. This year the application rate has increased by 37 per-cent. Said the Executive Dean, Dr. F. B. Beswick, "We really only have 162 places, but I've managed to squeeze in an extra 20. Choosing the lucky 182 has been more difficult than ever before, for not only have applicants increased in quantity, but also in quality."

"In the next two weeks," said Dr. Beswick, "I'm going to have to turn away 38 prospective doctors, all of whom I consider first rate material for medicine, both academically and temperamentally."

At the London Hospital Medical College in Whitechapel, Dr. John Ellis also confirmed a big selection problem. "This year," he said, "we have had several hundred applications from graduates. Normally we take five or six degree people. Selection has been a real headache. I could have filled the school with graduates if I chose."

"This situation," said the report, "repeated at medical schools up and down the country has a certain irony in the light of our dependency on overseas doctors to keep the NHS ticking over."

According to the report, the shortfall, in terms of British doctors per head of the population, is blamed jointly on a failure in manpower planning and an increase in medical emigration between 1957 and 1968.

Nearly 30 years ago, in 1944, the Interdepartmental Committee on Medical Schools - the Goodenough Committee - recommended a future intake for British medical schools of about 2,500 students a year. Allowing for wastage during training and the loss of foreign students, who would return to their own countries when qualified, it was estimated that this would provide an annual output of around 2,100 doctors for the NHS.

SHARP CUT-BACK

In 1957 a further committee appointed by the Health Departments - the Willink Committee - reversed this recommendation. They advised a sharp cut-back in medical school places, with the result that in 1965 only 1,500 completed training - 600 less than those estimated as likely to be needed in the 1944 report.

The effect was to cause a substantial shortage of doctors. This was exacerbated by the migration of many overworked and frustrated British doctors, tempted by better pay and prospects abroad.

This shortage was of course met by the flood of doctors from overseas.

The fault for the situation that now exists lies principally with the Willink Committee. By drastically reducing the number of places open to British medical students, they caused the shortage. Now, although the medical authorities say that they are trying to correct this error, they cannot do so adequately unless they are willing to give medical training to all British students who apply and have the necessary qualifications. This would mean drastically reducing the number of immigrant doctors in hospitals to make way for them once they qualified. This the authorities are not prepared to do, and so we have the ridiculous situation described at the beginning of this report, in which huge numbers of talented British would-be doctors are being turned away.

In the opinion of many leading medical spokesmen, the standards of a great number of immigrant doctors are well below those required by British medical schools, so that the general quality of the health service suffers.

It all leaves one wondering - was the recommendation of the Willink Committee a genuine mistake? Or was it a recommendation made on orders from above, in compliance with a policy of leaving great shortages in the health service to be filled by immigrant doctors? We ask this because such a miscalculation seems quite incredible where experts on the health service are concerned.

Whatever the answer, the fact remains that there are ample people of British nationality ready soon to fill vacant places in our health service. The allegation that the service would not run but for overseas born doctors is therefore downright rubbish.

TOM ANDERSON

AN AMERICAN VIEW OF U.N.O.

Reprinted with acknowledgements to AMERICAN WAY FEATURES, Nashville, Tenn.

WE who oppose the United Nations are called isolationists, kooks, haters, and aginners. Like the bar fly who fell asleep in his chair. Another drunk rubbed a little limburger cheese in his moustache. The limburger lad awoke, staggered up to the bartender, and said: "Ain't it awful!"

"Ain't what awful?"

"The whole world stinks!"

To me, everything in the U.N. stinks.

The U.N. is immoral in concept and in action. It is an ill-conceived mixture of oil and water, friend and enemy, Christian and cannibal. Putting our faith and fortune, life and liberty into the hands of the U.N. is like a cow entering a cage of hungry lions to vote on what they'll have for dinner tonight.

AN INCREDIBLE DREAM

World brotherhood through the U.N. is an incredible dream requiring the impossible unification of Christ and anti-Christ, morality and immorality, freedom with slavery.

Free nations cannot unite with police state nations. Free armies can't integrate with unfree. Free people can't unite with slaves. Parliamentary palaver can't produce peace. World peace can't be bought by surrendering sovereignty to any kind of a world government — even a moral one.

We must have a foreign policy based on American strength instead of U.N. weakness. Based on right instead of wrong. On God instead of the Devil.

The U.N. is Communism and Communism has no morals. The Communist philosophy, and hence the U.N. philosophy, is to lie, cheat, murder, and destroy whatever individuals or whatever civilisations stand in Communism's way of taking the world.

CONCEIVED BY CRIMINALS

The U.N. Charter was conceived in sin, by criminals, American traitors and Marxists. Molotov and Hiss secretly set it up so that the military chief of the U.N. would always be a Russian, appointed by the Kremlin.

Since the U.N. was founded, the Communist criminals have increased their slavery from 250 million to one billion people. Since the U.N. was founded, there have been more wars than for any similar period in history — most of them incited by the Communists.

The U.N. is a talkathon, by a mouth with no teeth and two tongues, one in each cheek.

"The U.N. favours disarmament." Certainly! So the Communist U.N. will control the world. "The U.N. favours peace." Certainly — the peace of the graveyard, the peace of the firing squad — after the bodies have been dumped in the mass grave. The peace of surrender.

ALL PLANNED THAT WAY

People prattle about the United Nations "failures". They were not failures; they were planned that way! The U.N. "failure" to win in Vietnam; "failure" to prevent Communist infiltration of Central and South America; "failure" to win in Korea; "failure" to prevent the rape of Cuba, Tibet, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Katanga and the Congo; "failure" to restore freedom to the people of Latvia, Estonia, Lithuania, Poland, East Germany, Bulgaria, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Russia and China.

These were not failures! These were U.N. successes! The U.N. is the enemy! As General MacArthur stated, the Communist head of the U.N. military staff reviewed all orders going from the Pentagon to General MacArthur and gave them to the enemy before MacArthur received them. This was treason and treason is, to say the least immoral.

AGAINST RULERS OF DARKNESS

Have you ever heard of a Marxist, a Communist, a Liberal, a Black Panther, a C.F.R. member, a Rockefeller, a Fonda, a Hiss, a Kissinger being against the U.N.? It's got to be immoral!

Perhaps the point is put best in Ephesians 6:10-12, where the Bible commands: "Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of His might. Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the Devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

We cannot oppose evil by compromising with evil. We cannot go forth into all the world and spread the gospel of Jesus Christ if we deny Jesus Christ in the United Nations, in our schools, and in our daily lives. We become part of what we condone.

The United Nations plays chess while we play poker. The enemy's moves are coldly calculated all the way. We lost pot after pot because our cards are marked, the deck is stacked and the dealer is crooked. But we stay in the game because it's the only game in town.

GREATEST FRAUD IN HISTORY

The devil has certainly been in hog heaven in recent years. A preacher announced one recent Sunday that there are 746 sins. Ever since then he's been plagued with phone calls asking for copies of the list.

They say the U.N. building must be enlarged. So must Hell (Isa. 5:14). The U.N. and its handmaiden Communism, are two sides of the same coin — the greatest fraud in all history.

One world "brotherhood" and "internationalism" are projects of the Devil, not of God, for God has prescribed nationalism (Deut. 32:8). In fact, God divided the people into nations to keep them from being destroyed (Gen. 9 and 10).

So, when we defend the sovereignty of our nation, we are doing God's will. But unless more people get involved, Christian and non-Christian, the next generation of Americans will experience what Walt Rostow called "an end to nationhood" — which means an end to American liberty.

FATHER OF LIES AND LIARS

The Bible tells us that the Devil — the father of lies and liars — will deceive the whole world (John 8:44). Again and again the Bible warns us not to be deceived, especially during the last days, by Satan — the prince of the oen-world system (John 12:31; 13:30; and II Cor. 4:4).

Ever since Satan's fall, his plan and insatiable ambition has been to establish one-world government under himself. A world without God, without human freedom, without morality, without nationalism, without marriage, family, home. A world of enslaved robots under the Anti-Christ.

REPATRIATION OR NATIONAL RUIN?

REPATRIATION of immigrants by voluntary or obligatory means? This, it appears, is what we are all arguing about at the moment. Well, it is something that we have come that far. A few years ago to talk about repatriation at all was to mention the unmentionable, to raise matters that one just didn't raise in 'decent' circles. Times have changed and, thank heavens, sanity is a little more widespread. A serious issue is at last being discussed seriously.

But still not seriously enough. I was struck by this thought as I watched the whole business debated on Weekend World, an ITV Sunday morning programme last month. The main topic of the programme was the leadership battle in the Monday Club between Messrs. Jonathan Guinness and George Young, but it turned out that a big factor in that battle was a divergence of viewpoint on repatriation. Mr. Young believed that repatriation could only be made effective in the long run by it becoming obligatory; Mr. Guinness was adamant that a voluntary scheme was as far as we should dare to go. What I found worthy of further analysis was not Guinness's view as such — which is a common enough platitude in contemporary politics — but the reasons he gave for it.

The whole thing is, for Mr. Guinness, a moral issue! He sees the obligatory repatriation of immigrants as an operation that would cause considerable hardship to many members of the immigrant population and which would require measures of state which are thoroughly distasteful to him. He made it quite clear that if he were faced between the choice of applying such measures and accepting a multi-racial Britain he would prefer a multi-racial Britain.

INTELLECTUALLY PATHETIC

I find Mr. Guinness's attitude, and that of people like him, pathetic in two ways: intellectually pathetic because it betrays a confusion of mind in its total disregard for historical imperatives, and morally pathetic because I detect behind this confusion of mind a desperate desire not to swim too far from the shallow waters of effete British liberal opinion and their soothing properties. It is the kind of thinking that characterises the whole of the last half-century of British twilight; better to lower the flag gracefully and with gloves on than to dirty well manicured hands in the fight to keep it flying!

What about the historical imperative side? To my poor peasant way of thinking, there cannot be any greater historical imperative to us than the survival of the British people — and by that I do not mean the mere physical survival of the people living in the British islands, but the survival of British civilisation, culture, technology, custom and tradition as we have known these things for the last 1,000 to 2,000 years, meaning the survival in the British people of the qualities of mind and character that have given rise to these things.

The Egyptians survived — if by that you mean that there are still people living in Egypt today. The peoples of South America survived — in the sense that that semi-continent is still highly populated.

But as for the survival of the great civilisations that once existed in those areas — all that remain of these are a few items of archaeological interest. The races that enabled such civilisations to live are biologically almost extinct, hence the civilisations themselves are extinct.

NICE, TRENDY TERM

Multi-racial society in Britain? Yes, nice trendy, idealistic term. But what happens when we follow the concept to its conclusion? It means the ultimate integration of black and white, of brown and white, the crossing of immigrant stocks with our own native British stock, the eventual complete changing of the British breed.

If it should be claimed that the numbers of immigrants left behind after a programme of voluntary repatriation had been carried out would be insufficient to bring this about, I would immediately deny that claim. In the first place, there are far too many immigrants doing very nicely for themselves in this country to want to leave it. Secondly, the fact that the greater number of immigrant families now have children born here will make them reluctant to leave the only country that their children know. Thirdly, the higher immigrant birth-rate will inexorably increase their numbers as a proportion of the total population. There can be no argument about the fact that, if allowed to stay here, they will eventually outbreed us; the only argument is when.

And a long time before the outbreeding process catches up on us we will have racial trouble in this country on a scale many times what it is now, probably on a scale comparable with that of the United States.

No doubt the likes of Jonathan Guinness will say that this might not happen. I say that it will happen, but I will argue on his terms if he prefers; let us say that it might not — this itself is an acceptance that it might. The very fact that it might happen is reason enough to take out an insurance against it. The very fact that wars might happen is reason enough for us to maintain armies and navies, to store weapons; we don't wait till we know that a war will happen before we take these steps.

If there is a possibility that a racial conflagration might happen, and that in the longer term the British people might undergo a fundamental change through racial mixture, that they might be outbred by immigrant stocks; is that not sufficient reason to take all necessary steps to avoid such a possibility?

No person in his right mind wants to see hardship brought to the immigrants in the process of repatriation.

But when the choice is between repatriation of the immigrants, with the possibility — indeed the probability — of hardship to some of them, and the alternative that exists — of race conflagration that will cause certain hardship to many more immigrants and native British, followed by the eventual racial extinction of the British nation — I am dumbfounded that anyone could hesitate over the matter, that anyone could contest that repatriation by whatever means necessary is the only solution.

There is no denying that the needs of decency and humanity in this world impose upon us some restraints as to the way that we conduct our affairs, but no promptings of decency or humanity have ever in history justified in a people that they risk their future extinction!

My enjoyment to the Jonathan Guinnesses of this world therefore is: for God's sake come down to earth and meet the situation face-to-face, stop talking in dainty abstractions and declare on which side you stand. Are you on the side of national life or national death? Let us know now; there isn't time to waffle any more; the ramparts are falling and the tide is flooding in!

New Vocabulary

By U.S. Congressman JOHN R. RARICK

ONE of the saddest of all commentaries on the entire Vietnamese war settlement came in the form of a question posed by one of the returning POW's the other day. In all seriousness, he asked: "Who won the war?" To his utter amazement, he could not get an answer.

The returning Prisoners of War have a great deal to learn about the American culture into which they are returning. A great many changes have taken place in people's attitudes and thinking during their absence.

For instance a new language is emerging. The meaning of older words are changing and completely different connotations are attached to them.

When the Dictionary was being written by our leaders "victory" was one word immediately stricken. "Surrender" and "cease-fire" are the two most common synonyms used to replace it. Phrases such as "peace with honour" are being used to replace "withdrawal" and "retreat".

Translation of the rhetoric used by our government leaders may be necessary before repatriated POW's understand the meaning. For instance, when the Secretary of Defence makes a statement that U.S. economic assistance to Hanoi depends on the stability of the Vietnam peace settlement, a translation is in order. What is meant is that if the Communists agree to behave, we'll give them $2.5 million in bribe money.

There is a great deal for the returning POW's to relearn. Some may even be labouring under the mistaken idea that wars are fought to be won.

THE ATTACK ON SOUTHERN AFRICA

PART 2

"WE CAME to kill all Europeans, not only selected groups. You cannot select women and leave them out of it. If I were to see a white child at a vantage point, I would kill it there." The statement of a captured terrorist, who, with a band of Chinese-trained and armed African Guerillas had infiltrated into Caprivi, the north east tip of South West Africa. This South African-administered territory is today faced with hostility in both terrorist and political form, and could make World headlines in the near future.

camps in the staging areas, just inside the Zambian border with S. W. Africa's Caprivi Strip. They then infiltrate this border and also through Angola and Botswana. The Angolan guerilla army M.P.L.A. (which is generally acknowledged the most formidable in Africa) has recently placed its resources at the disposal of S.W.A.P.O. This move could increase efficiency and pose a new threat to the security forces of South West Africa.

S.W.A.P.O.'s POLITICAL ACTIVITIES

S.W.A.P.O.

The extremists responsible for the terror campaign are the South West Africa People's Organisation, which was founded in Cape Town in 1957 on the advice of well-known South African leftists. In 1961, after years of agitation, Sam Nujoma, 'President' of S.W.A.P.O. and the more prominent conspirators, fled South West Africa because of their role in instigating a disastrous riot in the capital Windhoek. In December 1962, these exiles met in Dar es Salaam to plan all-out guerilla warfare with the objective of undermining and eventually dominating S. W. Africa. Financial backing and insurgency training came from Algeria, North Korea, the Soviet Union and China. And on August 26th 1966, the first clash between S.W.A.P.O. terrorists and South African police took place at Ongulumbashe, in northern South West Africa. In the early stages S.W.A.P.O. avoided the security forces wherever possible and concentrated on isolated white farmsteads. This was in line with Nujoma's statement that S.W.A.P.O. "would use all methods" to achieve its ends. Later guerilla tactics included attacking police posts and administration buildings. On June 21st 1967, the Terrorism Act was passed in the South African Parliament, as a direct result of the situation in S. W. Africa. And S.W.A.P.O. officials subsequently arrested admitted accepting the Communist ideology.

South African para-military police are now engaged in a concentrated counter-offensive against S.W.A.P.O. terrorists along S. W. Africa's extensive borders. No easy task, as the South West Africa-Zambia border is 146 miles long; the South West Africa-Angola border is 866 miles long and the South West Africa-Botswana border 870 miles long. After their training in Eastern countries, the guerillas are billeted at base

S.W.A.P.O. representatives have recently visited several European capitals for talks with Heads of State, including E.E.C. President Dr. Mansholt, pressing for the boycott of South African goods. The movement also has influential sympathisers in the United States. But it is the U.N.O., which has given S.W.A.P.O. international recognition and Observer status, where S.W.A.P.O. does most damage. The General Assembly refers to S.W.A.P.O. as 'Nationalists' engaged in a 'Liberation Struggle'. S.W.A.P.O. also has offices in London (a haven for foreign agitators and revolutionaries since Marx) and influential friends within the Labour Party. A member of S.W.A.P.O.'s Committee addressed the A.A.M. meeting at the Labour Party Conference in October 1971. He stated that although the subject of S. W. Africa was less familiar to British audiences than Rhodesia and South Africa, the latter's vulnerability on the issue should be exploited.

U.N. vs. S.W.A.

A far more serious threat to the security of South West Africa, are the designs of the Afro-Asian dominated U.N.O.. A former German colony, S. W. Africa was mandated to South Africa by the League of Nations in 1920. The Mandate stated that South Africa was to administer the territory and apply its own laws, as to an integral part of the Union. A barren underpopulated country, South West Africa soon became modern and prosperous under South African administration. The Second World War led to the establishment of the United Nations Organisation; which declared that it had superseded the League of Nations and demanded that the League Mandate be transferred to the U.N.. Under no legal obligation and complying with the inhabitants' wishes, South Africa declined. In 1960, sixteen new African countries had joined the U.N., and the Afro-Asian bloc now made up half of the Organisation's membership. This, added to the overbearing influence of the Communist bloc, kept the spotlight on South West Africa. Also in 1960, Ethiopia and Liberia contesting the legality of the South African administration, brought action against South Africa before the International Court. After years of legal proceedings, in which South Africa had set out the true facts and invited the Court to inspect the territory, the claims of Ethiopia and Liberia were dismissed on 18th July 1966 on the grounds that they had no legal right or interest in the country. This decision brought a wave of hysteria from the U.N. General Assembly, which declared that it henceforth 'terminated' the Mandate and 'renamed' the country 'Namibia', and that the administration in South West Africa was now 'illegal'.

U.N. ARROGANCE

In reply, South Africa reaffirmed that she would not allow the inhabitants of S. W. Africa to be forced into an artificial unit against their wishes. And in accordance with those wishes, the South African Odendaal Commission recommended the establishment of ten homelands for the indigenous inhabitants and a five-year development plan financed by the South African Government. This was seen by the U.N. to be the establishment of Apartheid (Separate Development) in the territory, which it proclaimed was a "crime against humanity". Pretoria, still desiring to reach an understanding with the U.N., invited U.N. officials to tour South West Africa. In November 1961, the Carpio-de-Alva Mission visited and published a subsequent report approving of the South African administration. This report was rejected by the U.N.. In March 1972, U.N. Secretary-General Dr. Waldheim (after pre-travel talks with the S.W.A.P.O. committee in Geneva) arrived in Windhoek. Despite the obvious contentment of the country's Africans, who enjoy better education, better health and social services, full employment and higher wages than the Africans in the Black States north of the Zambezi, Dr. Waldheim was unmoved. South Africa then offered a plebiscite, which was arrogantly dismissed by the U.N., and more recently an Advisory Council. S.W.A.P.O.'s U.N. Observer team has termed them 'Gimmicks'.

DEMOCRATIC

Completely democratic, South West Africa has its own Legislative Assembly, which governs internal affairs, while sending M.P.'s to the South African Parliament. All African institutions, including trade unions, are protected by law and even S.W.A.P.O. political branches are not banned. The Africans enjoy freedoms undreamt of in the Black States to the North. But the opponents of the free South, while paying lip-service to the welfare of Africans, seek only the destruction of civilisation and freedom for all races. And the very fact that governments of Southern Africa provide for multi-national instead of multi-racial entities is heresy to a citadel of internationalism like the United Nations. The U.N. now has a permanent Council on 'Namibia', and the recent appointment of Chinese delegates to senior positions, casts an ominous cloud on the future.

'WORLD OPINION'

Whatever its original ideal, the United Nations Organisation has now become a rostrum for Black racism, masquerading as effort-for-equality. The issue of South West Africa is overshadowed by Rhodesia. But should Rhodesian independence be recognised in the future, all the hatred of the U.N. would be turned upon South West Africa. The General Assembly terms S. W. Africa as "a grave threat to international peace and security", and has hinted at possible sanctions against South Africa. Outside the U.N., has S. W. Africa friends in the Western World? President Nixon declared (May 20th 1970) that the U.S.A. would "actively discourage American investment in S.W.A. as long as South African administration continued in defiance of the U.N." And French and British delegates to the General Assembly and Security Council have either voted against S. W. Africa or abstained on the issue.

In Britain itself a parallel could be drawn. For our country is today faced, in Ulster, with the Urban terrorist, the evil equivalent of the Rural terrorist that confronts South West Africa. And the atrocities committed by terrorists in Southern Africa put those of the I.R.A. in the shade. Also, should Britain in the future attain a government truly representative of the people, i.e. that frees them from the yoke of multi-racialism, all the venom of the U.N.O. and 'World Opinion' would be turned on us. In 1939, S. W. African volunteers were among the first to come to the defence of our country. So, for those of us who do not forget our friends, only one maxim can apply: Stand by the Whites in South West Africa!

Support for NF

Here are just two examples of the many letters that have appeared in the local papers in West Bromwich in support of the National Front election fight there.

Supported by people?

What a marvellous reception the National Front received in West Bromwich on Saturday. The march through the town was a delight to see, also the meeting afterwards when Mr. Webster spoke to nearly 500 people. What a far cry from the Labour candidate's meeting on Monday when it was found necessary to have one of their big guns, Mr. Roy Jenkins, speaking for them. This meeting was attended by about 50 people.

Surely this shows where the support of the English people lies.

Last Saturday I saw something which I had not seen for many a long day and, I might add, something I thought I would never see again.

What I saw — and it seemed so strange — was a large gathering of English people marching through the town centre of West Bromwich, to the tune of "Land of Hope and Glory".

I refer to the National Front march which was in support of their parliamentary candidate, for next week's by-election, Mr. Martin Webster.

From what I had read and heard on T.V., I thought I was going to see a rabble-rousing gang of young Fascist thugs.

One can imagine my surprise when I saw the old-age pensioners, mothers with children in prams, children walking proudly alongside their parents and clean-cut, well dressed decent looking young people.

I quickly caught up with the marchers, went to their meeting, heard some heartening speeches and have now applied to join "The Front".

THE FALSEHOOD OF POLITICS

LENIN CALLED IT HIS "MIGHTIEST WEAPON"

NO ONE can hope to be able to interpret and understand politics, whether national or international, who has not already penetrated and fully understood the potentiality of what Lenin called his "most powerful weapon" — the lie.

The lie is a powerful weapon because the great majority of people are honest. And people who are honest not only speak the truth and live the truth most of the time, but they habitually believe what they are told. The credulity of the truth-teller is a habit not easily broken.

On the other hand, habitual liars are not easily defeated by lies. One of the criminals involved in the Oppenheimer jewel robbery learned this to his cost a couple of years after his South African adventure, when he tried to execute an ingenious confidence trick on some Arabs in Tangier. It was their incredulity, their distrust, born out of their own untruthfulness and untrustworthiness, that landed the trickster in gaol.

Millions of people today, especially in the Western world, are politically disabled to a greater or lesser degree by an honesty that renders them dangerously vulnerable to the skilfully used lie. Being themselves free from guile they are utterly incapable of detecting it in another. Nay, they cannot even suspect something that lies altogether outside their understanding.

They are defeated, as it were, by opponents operating in another dimension of reality.

The average man — and that description often includes people in positions of great responsibility in the Western world — trusts and expects to be trusted.

This simplicity, this frankness, this naivete, this innocent trustfulness — the attributes of a race which has survived down the ages by bravery rather than by cunning — all these things have become a source of weakness in the world of today. They provide a rich soil in which the lie grows and multiplies in tropical luxuriance.

ART OF DISSIMULATION

When Lenin spoke about his "most powerful weapon" he was not referring to the simple untruthful statement of fact, whether in speech or writing. That sort of lie is for schoolboys. Here there is always an element of danger, calling for some courage in the liar. Therefore it is not the kind of lie that exerts the most deadly influence in modern power politics.

Lenin was referring to the whole complex, marvellously recondite art of dissimulation in which even honest men are frequently involved, serving unwittingly as the most effective instruments of deception and betrayal.

Never is the lie more effective and more dangerous to a nation than when it is propagated by honest men who have accepted it as the truth and pass it on in good faith.

What happens almost invariably, therefore, is that weak minds and weak personalities are first infected, and these are then turned loose on the rest of the population; not only turned loose, sometimes, but organised into parties and political groups and richly supplied with funds.

In this way, falsehood is used as Weapon No. 1 against the national spirit everywhere. Let us consider briefly how it happens.

REACTIONS UNDER PRESSURE

In any nation at any time there are people who are strong and courageous and there are people who are weak and timid.

There are those who are inclined to endure the nervous tension, the pressure and even real danger to life and limb, in their determination to preserve their nation intact and along with it all the things they value most.

The others lack the power to resist hostile pressure. They cannot stand the nervous tension that is inseparable from any opposition of vital interests. Hence they are powerfully inclined to seek relief from the agony of tension by giving way.

Now here is a most significant fact: the weak man will never admit that he is weak. He will admit that he is not physically strong, but he will not admit that he is not morally strong. The timid man will not admit his timidity, his chicken-heartedness. To do so would involve the collapse of his self-respect, the principle of integrity that holds his faculties together.

There are some things a man cannot admit to himself without destroying himself altogether.

As an individual, the man of weak spirit feels that his survival is threatened by the determination of the group to preserve itself and its values. Yet he cannot dissociate himself from his group. He cannot live without the emotional sustenance that his group provides.

So how is he to resolve his personal conundrum, except by trying to prevail upon his group to give way, to make concessions, to give up the struggle?

POLITICAL WEAKLINGS

It is most important that we should remember that the weak man in this context is the one who is politically weak. He is weak in respect of that complex of instincts, aptitudes and appetite for conflict which binds the individual to his society, rendering him willing to suffer and endure and even sacrifice himself entirely for that society.

Weak men of this class are always most numerous in the artificial environment of a great city and are found in the highest concentration among those commonly known as the "urban intelligentsia" — that is to say, people who by reason of an excessive specialisation in purely mental pursuits have suffered a certain loss of animal vigour and an etiolation of the instinctual side of their personalities.

The same qualities — or rather, lack of qualities — that make them poor human material in a hot war, make them poor material, too, in a cold war. In time of hot war they supply the pacifists; in time of cold war the prophets of doom and the ideological appeasers.

The presence of a substantial element of this kind inside a nation offers a wonderful opportunity to the enemy, whether it is an external enemy or an internal one.

How does he exploit this opportunity? He supplies the clever, instinctually etiolated ones with a rationalisation of their weakness, their pusillanimity! He "proves" to them that they are right, and even "good", and that the strong ones who are ready to go down fighting are foolish, and perhaps even wicked!

He gives to the weak element in the population an ideological justification, something it so desperately needs. In this way he makes weakness and timidity appear as proof of superior intelligence and virtue.

Nay, he will even undertake to "prove" that it is braver to submit than to resist!

In this way the enemy seeks to create division in the nation which, as the pressure and the danger increase, he hopes to be able to widen.

How eagerly the politically weak grasp at this philosophy of self-justification!

The preservation of national integrity, like the preservation of a genuine individual integrity, is never easy. It is always the hardest way. And yet there is no other way if we are to preserve the things that make life worth having at all. The elite of every race has always preferred death to servitude — be it even a comfortable servitude. And it is only instinct that prompts us to risk all in order to preserve that without which life is valueless — our freedom as individuals and as a nation. On this issue, pure reason, as Shakespeare said, is a whore.

The politically weak one is unequal to the challenge. As he contemplates the field of conflict he is filled with distress.

Ah, but what is this thing that is offered to him? A philosophy, sustained by many excellent reasons: a philosophy that "proves" that it is wrong for a nation to insist on preserving itself; a philosophy that "proves" that the individual will find his highest fulfilment in an ideal of universal brotherhood that denies all national loyalties!

He finds it nothing less than a message of salvation!

GLOWING IMAGE OF HIMSELF

Now the weak man is allowed to see himself as a superior moral being, the man of the future, the pioneer of universal peace and brotherhood, a person towering over the rest of mankind in terms of intelligence and benevolence. Not surprisingly, he falls madly in love with the glowing image of himself.

He is now a Liberal. His thinking is Progressive. Other people are Reactionary. They belong to the past.

Here we see how weakness in a society is flattered and fostered and richly nourished, so that it grows and spreads throughout the nation like a cancer of the blood.

How much more rare and precious courage will be when weakness has at last been made respectable — nay, even admirable!

The weak have been persuaded that they are strong. Those most ready to run are taught that they should be leading. Those who have lost their nerve now believe that they have found a new enlightenment.

Was ever a more monstrous falsehood perpetrated on mankind?

This falsehood has even become for millions of people all over the Western world a new gospel. The gospel of Academic Humanism. The gospel of Socialism. The gospel of Communism. The gospel of World Government. The gospel of the ultimate enslavement of mankind.

In this way our enemies seek to destroy our nation, giving substance and status and respectability and material aid to those most inclined to yield to pressures which our own enemies themselves apply.

These enemies of ours — are they also weak? No — They are strong ones using the weak for their own ends. Make no mistake about it, in the end it is the racial and national impulse that prevails.

One of history's greatest realists will vouch for that — Benjamin Disraeli. For Disraeli, later Lord Beaconsfield, says in Endymion: "No one must lightly dismiss the question of race. It is the key to world history and it is precisely for this reason that written history so often lacks clarity — it is written by people who do not understand the race question and what belongs to it. Language and religion do not make a race only blood doth that."

THE ONLY ISSUE

The racially weak ones, the idealists, the Liberals, the Progressives — call them what you will — are guided and sponsored and encouraged and financed at different times by International Finance and International Communism, but in the end only a race and a nation can win.

The only issue waiting to be settled in any historic opposition of forces is: Which nation? Which race?

The weak man, trying to preserve himself as an individual, betrays his nation and his race in a world struggle that is eternally national and racial. Nay, for the weak man the overthrow of his own race and nation has become the way of salvation, the ultimate justification, the be-all and end-all of his existence!

The weak man, sustained by a falsehood and haunted by the truth, has now become the perfect puppet, as helpless in the hands of Power as a piece on a chess-board.

And when it comes to the propagation of his miserable creed, what do we expect? Do we expect him to nail his flag to a mast, make a full and frank statement of a clear and consistent set of beliefs and invite a rigorous scrutiny of them? Of course not!

We expect what, in fact, we find.

Liberalism can live only by cunning. If all the genuine Liberals, the ones who have swallowed the lie and become one with it, if all these people who have found a personal salvation in the lie that their weakness is only a nobler kind of strength, if all these weaklings got together and formed a political party — that would be an honest thing to do, but it would be the end of them too.

The pattern of their tactics is repeated in many different countries: wherever they can they infiltrate other parties where their fanatical zeal and tireless energy gives them an influence out of all proportion to their numbers. Besides, they are always powerfully backed. They will join a party not because they subscribe to its principles but because they believe they can take over control and change the principles. Meanwhile, of course, they have been received in all innocence as genuine members sharing the same views.

If the party they have penetrated continues to be regarded by the electorate as "conservative", so much the better, so much more effective the deception.

This is what has happened in the United States whose Democratic and Republican parties have been accurately described as a "two-ring circus" — two political parties under the management of a single set of political forces.

Their preservation of an emasculated conservative party (like the Conservative Party in Britain and the Hoger Party in Sweden, to take only two familiar examples) is a brilliant piece of strategy, a masterpiece of their dissimulation.

Thereafter any real conservatives who dare to band themselves together and who have found a way of keeping out the political termites, are then branded as "Right wing extremists" and even worse. They are not nationalists, but "Fascists". Patriots are then contemptuously dubbed "Super-patriots"!

This phenomenon of genuine conservatives branded as "extremists" we see in the United States and in many of the European countries. The racially and nationally "sick" have captured all, or nearly all. Only small bridgeheads are retained by genuine patriots, the true custodians of Christianity and our Western European culture.

What makes our South African situation so interesting — to us and all the world — is that here the Liberals, and the men who back them, have suffered a major reverse. Here, by a quaint accident of history, there is a powerful trend flowing against them.

While in so many other countries they are still on the up-and-up, here, for several years, they have been on the down-and-down. That does not mean that they have ceased to represent a deadly danger. Far from it. Their undermining activities are prosecuted relentlessly and are bound to succeed in the end unless our nation remains fully armed in spirit and intelligence.

There is danger in supposing them defeated. There is worse danger in not knowing and acknowledging that mighty hostile powers lie in wait behind them.

It is in this reverse which the Applied Lie has suffered in South Africa that we must seek an explanation of a world-wide campaign of abuse and a vindictive ranging of forces against us.

South Africa, by rejecting the falsehood that lies at the heart of Liberalism, has put Liberalism and its moneyed sponsors in peril everywhere.

South Africa's ringing challenge and declaration of faith is like a trumpet blast outside the shoddy walls of a modern Jericho, built upon a foundation of lies.

Europe - or British freedom?

THE 'Fanfare for Europe' had scarcely sounded its last discordant and highly unwanted note, when the British public learnt of the scandal of 'Butter Mountain'. This rancid affair highlighted the whole business of the so-called 'Common Market' much more clearly than the cavorting of foreign entertainers and the waving of European flags in January ever did.

Europe of the 'European Economic Community' is now seen as the Con'man's Market of swindlers and exploiters. The anti-Marketeters were right; the instincts of the British public were right; only the Establishment politicians and the opinion-manufacturers of the media were wrong. Unfortunately, the issue of whether or not Britain should go into Europe is no longer an academic one. We are in, and once in we are now faced with the consequences. Having been committed to what is seen ever more clearly as a politico-economic Madhouse, it is going to prove difficult to cut through the barrage of 'expert' Establishment propaganda and reassert our national sanity by getting out.

Faced with rising prices, continuing inflation and a fall in the real standard of living, all sorts of ideas will be put forward as to how we can 'improve' Europe. There will be many seemingly opposed schemes and projects, but they will all have one common feature — none of them will be a programme for getting out of Europe and rebuilding our British world links.

LABOUR'S "RE-NEGOTIATION"

Wilson's Labour Party say that they will 're-negotiate the terms' — although there are no important ones capable of re-negotiation (as a member country of EEC must accept the 'Treaty of Rome' or withdraw altogether).

The Tory Party is satisfied with 'things as they are', and the Liberal Party would have been happy to accept any abject terms of surrendering British independence just as long as that were done.

All the Parliamentary politicians, the sleek Business public relations men and the ink-slingers of the media who crowed so loudly of the 'benefits' of Britain in Europe before we went in, now never dare to stump the country trying to deny the facts about Europe — those facts all can see.

This cannot last for long. Anti-Common Market forces slumped in bitter dismay after January, when the cause of keeping Britain out of Europe went down with flags flying. Many who had struggled since the early '60s furled their banners and went home. All seemed lost.

Happily, history shows us that when a nation suffers a defeat, gradually, after the first shock wears off, the forces of resistance re-emerge, and regroup, to fight again. The guerilla struggle is only sporadic to begin with, but slowly it organises in more and more effective campaigning, and its cause gains ground with each success.

The Occupying Power and/or its native collaborators are forced to respond out of the dire necessity of their own self-preservation. They can hit back by repression of a direct kind or more subtly can sponsor diversionary groups to split and break up the Resistance by causing disagreement on methods and final aims within the Resistance itself.

WAR OF WORDS

With the case of Britain in Europe, no armed force is at present involved; it is a war of words. Nevertheless, the comparison is a valid one, for the munitions of this war — T.V. and radio time and space in the Establishment press remain in the hands of the authorities. The anti-Europe arguments are played down or ignored — which is systematised suppression. At the same time the whole range of half-hearted viewpoints on 'reforming EEC' is given ample coverage — sufficient to confuse the instinctive — but not knowledgeable — opponents of Europe and to weaken the firm 'Get Britain Out' campaigners by making them look eccentric or extreme.

It is obvious that, with mounting evidence of the failure of the 'Common Market' as an economic cure-all, the anti-Market forces will gain a new strength and momentum which will cause very real concern to the 'powers that be'. It is essential that the anti-EEC campaign is not then diverted away from the goal of getting Britain out of Europe. There is an obvious temptation open to 'single issue' campaigners, which water down principles in an effort to spread the net of public support ever wider. This never works and usually leads to the campaign grinding to a halt — weighed down by compromise and prevarication, it just collapses in failure and ruin.

The principle must be maintained that Britain must be out of Europe — free and sovereign. Nothing less can command British Nationalist support. Nothing less is worthy of fighting for.

At this early stage, it is essential to establish just what is involved in the whole issue of "Britain in Europe".

It is not just an 'anti-Common Market' fight — but a Britain Out of Europe fight.

Perhaps the most dangerous ideological opponents of British Nationalism are those who oppose the 'Common Market' but support a 'United Europe'. It is easy to pinpoint the ramshackle and nonsensical 'EEC' superstructure.

It is a much more complex task to battle against the 'National European' idea.

There are those who say the 'Common Market' is certainly an Establishment racket, but, nonetheless, European nations ought to come together to build a 'Third Force' against Soviet Communism and U.S. Dollar Imperialism — and that Britain ought to be inside the 'New Europe'.

This siren-song does have a definite attraction to patriotically-inclined people — and this cannot be denied. It must therefore be tackled now as a matter of some urgency and in some detail.

To begin with, what is 'Europe'? It is a geographical expression. It is just an arbitrarily established region of the globe stretching from Iceland to the Urals. It does not co-incide with national or state boundaries. Both Russia and Turkey straddle 'Europe' and 'Asia'.

It is not an ethnic-racial entity either. The White Caucasoid race inhabits not only Europe but Australia, New Zealand, Canada, Southern Africa, Argentina, Uruguay, United States, Chile, Costa Rica etc. Coupled with this is the fact that racially the Spaniards and Italians are largely identical to the Tunisians and Algerians. The Greeks cannot be told apart from the Turks, by race alone. Nor can 'Christian' Europe be totally contrasted to the Islamic world. The European Albanians and Bosnian Serbs are Moslem. The Arab Maltese and Lebanese are Christian.

DISCOUNTED EUROPEANS

Politically, Europe is divided between the spheres of influence of Soviet Communism and "Western" U.S.-based Capitalism. This division has made redundant the expression 'Central Europe' and even divides one nation — the Germans — into two states. Any talk of "Uniting Europe" today necessarily discounts those Europeans behind the Iron Curtain.

So what is Europe? Basically, anything you want it to be — within some very broad and largely indefinable limits. Not a very satisfactory foundation for the 'United Europe' advocates to build on one would have thought!

Having said this, we have the reality of the EEC. This began as a bonding between Belgium, France, Germany, Italy, Luxembourg and the Netherlands. It could be said that there is some sense in continental countries with common frontiers and a common continental outlook coming together in some sort of association but once this starts to be rapidly expanded in all directions it becomes a nonsense, pure and simple.

Why should Britain join 'Europe'? If it is just a matter of geographical proximity then by the same argument Morocco could join. If it is intended as a 'Whitemans Club' then all the Dominions, the U.S.A. and half South America could join. Where too, do "political links" end? One Parliament, with at least six major language groups involved? A federation of states then — all jockeying for power, trading favours and scheming deals behind one another's backs?

The prospects under either system would be bleak indeed.

If the peoples of some of the nations of Europe genuinely desire to link together — well, that is their affair. If on the other hand, International Capitalism based in the U.S.A. seeks to sink Britain in Europe in order to grab up New Zealand, Canada, Australia, etc. that is another matter entirely!

Britain's historical, ethnic and natural economic ties are with the British nations overseas in the White Dominions. In this kind of link-up the British have a chance of defending their identity and freedom. From the point of view of national freedom, it does not matter if Britain joined EEC to be bossed by West Europeans and exploited by Capitalists, or joined the Soviet Union as the British Soviet Socialist Republic to be bossed about by Russians and exploited by Soviet Communists! National Freedom is an absolute. You either have it or you don't.

Democratic government, national self-reliance, a sense of common identity and a desire for securely defended sovereign independence are the only safeguards of personal liberty — and that too is an absolute.

This is what British Nationalism is all about. "Europe a Nation" for Britons is just "Europe a Notion" — and a dangerous one at that.

For the British Nationalist the issue is Freedom — freedom for the nation and the individual. The anti-Europe fight is a fight for freedom — and if freedom is worth having — as it surely is — then it is worth fighting for.

THOUGHT FOR THE MONTH

It seems to be impossible to get people in Britain and America to realise that the capitulation of the West is due entirely to pressures exerted from within, not to pressures exerted from without. There is nothing 'inevitable' about it as we are taught to repeat. The 'march of events' is being paced out to the tune of Western 'fiddlers'. The 'developing nations' are being 'developed' only by the West and at the cost of the West.

There are power interests at work in the world. There are strategies, tactics, ambitions, motives. It is not a world filled with an agonised sympathy for the underdog, as so many of us suppose. It is a bloody and desperate battleground; and its fine liberal slogans are nothing but an essential part of the business of putting the best possible 'image' upon whatever line of action the powermongers propose to take. This is why the process of subjugating the Whites must always be presented as the process of elevating the non-whites.

Anthony Jacob
WHITE MAN, THINK AGAIN!

FIRST WE'VE HEARD OF IT!

Here is a hilarious piece of nonsense from the leftist camp which we could not resist reproducing for the entertainment of our readers. It is a letter that appeared recently in May Day Militant, the "Marxist Paper for Labour and Youth". It alleges that the National Front is shortly about to start a branch in Hastings, Sussex and that they are also planning a march and rally in the town. The local lefty representative appeals to all good comrades to help him combat the NF menace.

Mr. Joyce seems extremely well informed on NF plans — so well informed in fact that he knows of events of which Spearhead is totally ignorant, and indeed the National Front leadership as well! We have checked with the NF National Activities Organiser, with the NF Branch Development Committee and with NF organisers in the Sussex area and none of them has any knowledge whatever of plans to set up an NF branch in Hastings in the immediate future or hold a march and rally there.

Perhaps Mr. Joyce is one of those left-wingers prone to suffer nightmares about the National Front and during such a nightmare he saw legions of Frontmen tramping the streets of his home town.

Seriously though, this letter shows in typical manner how these left-wing organisations rely on the threat from their enemies — real or imagined — to keep them going. From the point of view of the left protest industry, as with its partner the race relations industry, if the National Front did not exist it would have to be invented!

Labour Party Young Socialists Fight Racism

Dear Comrade,

After their campaign of lies in other parts of the country, the racist National Front is turning towards the South East in an attempt to win support by playing off the very real fears of parts of the population.

It is necessary that the National Front and other racist organisations are campaigned against on all possible occasions and the truth behind their lies revealed to prevent them gaining ground.

To these ends, the Hastings LPYS have committed themselves to an all-out struggle against the racists in our area, and it is hoped that other branches have, or will do the same. Of course the Hastings LPYS have not got the experience to fight the National Front entirely by ourselves, so we would welcome any advice, facts and figures from comrades more experienced in combatting racism.

The National Front have not yet established a branch in Hastings, but they intend to start one soon, before which they will be having a march and rally. We have found out that they are going to bring in members from near-by branches to bolster up their numbers.

It is important that the YS hold a counter-rally, for which YS members from other branches will be needed.

Send offers of help on our counter-march, and advice, facts and figures to Hastings LPYS, 25, Wellington Square, Hastings, Sussex, or to Bill Joyce, at 40, Tackleway, Hastings, Sussex.

We will let any comrades willing to take part in a counter-rally know when it's going to be as soon as we know ourselves, although this could be at very short notice.

Yours fraternally,
BILL JOYCE,
(Hastings)

A New Approach to Increasing NF Membership

IT IS OFTEN FELT that to acquire new members for the National Front all that one can really do is leaflet like mad and strike up the odd pointed conversation with a work-mate or casual acquaintance. I have found that this is not so.

The answer to the problem of getting more members goes a lot deeper than leafletting, although the latter does serve a very useful purpose. One has got to make a study of Mr. Average Briton, and my study type-casts him as follows:—

As long as he has his little home, food on the table, a regular job, a car outside the door and his fortnight by the seaside, he will not take much notice of anything else — apart from the football results — unless he is starkly confronted with it. Mr. Average Briton receives an NF leaflet through his door and more often than we care to realise picks it up and reads it, thoroughly agrees with it, puts it behind the clock to do something about sometime and eventually loses it on one of his wife's tidying up sessions. The prospective member is lost.

In my own area of Hertfordshire I have tried a completely new approach which, although in its infancy, has led to a high success rate. It works as follows:—

Choose an area of approximately 200 homes and leaflet these thoroughly. One week later go around the houses doing a canvass (this incidentally is good practice for election times). Prepare a canvass sheet in the following way: draw six columns down a piece of foolscap paper, with the name of the street at the top. Head each column as follows: Number of House; Satisfied with Present Government — yes or no; Member of the Conservative Party — yes or no; Member of the Labour or Liberal parties — yes or no; Heard of the National Front — yes or no; Call back.

Arm yourself with the canvass sheet mounted on a clip-board, a good supply of policy statements and membership application forms. Go to the first house in the street and knock boldly on the door (not timidly — after all, you are doing them a favour).

Introduce yourself as conducting a survey in the area for the National Front and ask them if they would mind you asking a few simple questions. Do not wait for a yes or no, but start straightaway.

To the question of "Are you satisfied with the present Government?" put a tick or cross in the appropriate column according to the answer. If the answer is yes, ask if they are a member of the Conservative Party. If the answer to this question is yes, put 'CP' in the next column and close the canvass — while trying to convert a committed Conservative, you could be signing up three new members elsewhere. If the answer is no, ask them whom they would prefer among the other parties. If they say Labour or Liberal, ask them if they are a member of the party concerned. If they are, mark the sheet and discontinue the canvass. If the person prefers another party apart from the National Front and is not a member, continue the canvass. Ask if they have heard of the National Front and mark the column appropriately. If they say they have not, give them a copy of the policy statement and arrange to call back and complete the canvass, booking an appointment in the last column. If they have heard of the National Front, ask them what they know about it. If their knowledge is shaky, again leave a copy of the policy statement and make an appointment to call back, as previously described. If their knowledge is good, approach them immediately about joining.

Once you have a completed canvass sheet you will have a valuable piece of information. I guarantee you will have plenty of enquiries by way of call backs. It is also worth remembering that anyone who is remotely interested but not prepared to become a member may well wish to buy Spearhead regularly and may join at a later date.

So far my results are that out of the houses canvassed 60 per-cent of the occupants are sympathisers and 32 per-cent have become members. Even if you do not get as good results as this, I am sure that your canvass will prove very much worth while and more effective in the way of recruitment than any other method taking the same amount of time and trouble.

As long as you get the basic hang of the method, you may make your own variations as to the exact form of the canvass sheet and questions.

Just Sketching the Surface

RACIAL prejudice is firmly entrenched among churchgoers, particularly Anglicans, according to a report published recently.

An Anglican priest, the Rev. John Fethney, of the United Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, has found in a survey that the average male worshipper is more likely to be prejudiced against coloured people than, for example, the average man in the Liberal Party.

Mr. Fethney, writing in the race relations industry journal Race Today, says that it is among the men where the greatest need for changed attitudes exist if the churches should ever attempt to produce some kind of educational programme.

Mr. Fethney's detailed findings are based on a sample of 150 white churchgoers in different parts of the country, including London, Manchester and York. He now hopes fresh research will be undertaken by the major denominations.

Mr. Fethney makes a comparison with statistics, published earlier, about prejudice among Liberal Party supporters. Churchgoers appear not unfavourably at first, but a striking change occurs when the views of students are removed.

About 23 per-cent of the men at churches sampled were inclined to prejudice, and 7 per-cent firmly prejudiced, compared with 16 per-cent of prejudice-inclined Liberals and only 4 per-cent clearly prejudiced.

Churchgoers were asked to say if they accepted any of the stereotyped prejudices such as coloured people being more likely than whites to be receiving benefits for unemployment or sickness; being the cause of overcrowding; and being more likely than whites to be involved in crime.

As many as 47 per-cent accepted at least one of these suggestions. The most thought coloured settlers were the cause of the overcrowding and housing shortage in inner city areas.

Most people would probably accept this survey as a truly meaningful and relevant contribution to the solving of the key spiritual problems of our modern society, but not Spearhead's theological adviser, Canon D. J. Leftward. Said the Canon:—

"The Rev. Fethney's survey is perhaps a step in the right direction, but it is only sketching the surface of the issue. I have plans for a much more comprehensive survey which will go a great deal further to establishing an understanding of the roots of prejudice."

Canon Leftward gave us a run-down on his scheme. A survey was to be taken, not only among 5 million churchgoers in Britain but half a million mothers, a quarter of a million grandmothers, a million children at kindergarten, 100,000 car-workers, 50,000 civil servants, 1,000 professional footballers, 10,000 postmen and 20 circus ringmasters. The survey was to cover every county in Britain from Cornwall to Caithness. It would include questions which would establish such things as how many mothers living in South West Lanarkshire, separated from their husbands and suffering from arthritis in the elbow, were strongly prejudiced against coloured people, how many were slightly prejudiced and how many not prejudiced at all — then how these figures would compare with similar ones from East Sussex; whether car-workers at Austin's at Longbridge were on average more or less prejudiced than those of Rolls Royce at Crewe; what proportion of footballers playing in the English Third Division would be prepared to take a coloured orphan into their home and how this figure compared with footballers playing in the Scottish League Division B; how many postmen thought that coloured immigrants took more out of social services than white people, how many thought they took less and how many thought they took about the same; whether prejudice was stronger among people who attended church in the evenings than those who attended in the mornings, and how many voted Tory, how many Labour, how many Liberal and how many National Front, how many thought 'Love Thy Neighbour' was a better TV programme than 'Till Death Us Do Part' and how many never watched TV at all except on Mondays.

"Until we have found out all the facts influencing prejudice," the Canon told us, "we will not be in a position to know in what way we should plan to re-shape human attitudes on this the most crucial problem confronting mankind in this or any age." The Canon informed us that 20,000 people would be working upon his survey, including clergymen, community workers, school-teachers, lawyers, statisticians, psychiatrists, pathologists, biologists and social anthropologists. The survey would take 20 years and would cost £5,000,000,000, including compensation to hundreds of industries brought to a standstill for weeks on end while it was being conducted in factories. He confidently expected that with Government grants combined with contributions from the Rowntree Trust, the Rockefeller Foundation and the Kremlin this money would eventually be raised.

I did not notice that the good Christian Archbishop of Canterbury or Bomber Thorpe open their doors to a down and out or a homeless couple or a young couple getting married, but the publicity was all they wanted. Thank God we as Christians do not favour the Muslims or Hindus or our homes would be over-run.

Charity begins at home, and this turning the other cheek, but I have been spat at in a bus and called an English Pig by an asian girl because I was the only white person on a 266 bus, and the conductor also asian joined in. These gentle people kill and maim their own children in India, what happens if they do that here when the going gets rough? Will we have begging in the streets and Cows walking about the high road, as well as all the diseases?

Now we are being dictated to by Patel who says let illegal immigrants stay here. Go to H---. He is a wealthy man, let him keep his people not the taxpayer. They have such large families they do not pay tax and are a drain on our National Health.

All power to the National Front. Let us see a new change in our Country, a change for the better. Remember the Continent do not want these people either, neither does India so there must be something wrong somewhere.

SIR: I found the questions and answers on National Front economic attitudes featured in your May issue most interesting. I am indeed glad that the NF has not fallen into the trap of committing itself to support of all-out capitalism. This is a tragic mistake made by many on the so-called 'right'.

Capitalism in its most extreme form is the perfect complement to the forces of world revolution, a fact that Marx understood only too well. Extreme capitalism creates the economic conditions required for Communism to thrive; Stock-exchange capital then provides the financial backing for Communist movements. Stock-exchange capital and revolutionary socialism are the two parts of an international vice which grips nations in order to squeeze them to death.

SIR: Martin Webster's article on the Monday Club last month spotlighted a number of interesting facts, and I have been particularly intrigued to read of recent leadership struggles within the Club.

Some brainwashed Club members that I know react with horror whenever I mention the National Front; they are forever calling it 'fascist'. However, if we assume 'fascism' to mean the opposite of democracy I would say that the Club is a great deal more fascist than the NF.

The Chairman of the Monday Club is elected only by people belonging to the national tier of membership. These are admitted only after careful vetting and have to pay a subscription of £5 a year. This means that the Club in large part has a leadership that is self-perpetuating. It selects the people who are going to vote it into office.

The National Front on the other hand has its Chairman elected by a Directorate which is in turn elected by the membership as a whole. Members are not subject to vetting and pay £2 or £1 a year. Far more democratic.

SIR: We were disgusted to read the letter you published regarding the offended Asian.

Many people of different races and creeds have settled in this country. We have not had to learn Hebrew, Irish, French or even Chinese. Neither do Vegetarians or Jews become offended when they see our meat displayed. At least they keep clean shops.

Our local M.P. told us that these Asians were well educated and gentle people. This Asian must be an ignorant peasant, because nice well bred people do not pass comments about their hosts.

These people are here, not because we wanted them, but because our Politicians are afraid they may lose face at the United Nations. Who cares? English or rather British people are too sick and tired of our wishy washy parties in power and out of power.

LETTER OF THE MONTH

Spearhead publishes the best letter to the press on National Front policy every month. Send your cutting to us not later than the 15th of the previous month. You could win a £1 Nationalist Books voucher. This month's winner (below) was published in the Kentish Independent.

ONCE again Mr. Bill Hamling has stood up in Parliament to champion the cause of the total abolition of censorship. Does he therefore consider that our society is not getting its fair share of filth and needs more?

To judge by some of the recently released films and the magazines that can be purchased at book-stalls, I would say we have ample.

At any one of half a dozen book-shops in Woolwich alone, it is possible to find publications guaranteed to satisfy even the most warped sexual appetites.

Mr. Hamling would do well to consider what has happened in certain Scandinavian countries.

In Sweden the abolition of all forms of censorship was a prelude to a very sharp rise in the figures for alcoholism, crimes of violence, drug-addiction and even suicide.

This may well be pure coincidence but many well-informed authorities, including leading sociologists, are convinced that the Swedes, having had their fill of sex, are having to get their 'kicks' by other means.

It may also come as a bit of a surprise to Mr. Hamling to learn that the Nazis considered pornography to be very important indeed; not as light reading material, as it happens, but as a weapon!

Prior to the Second World War the Germans flooded Poland with all kinds of pornographic material. They realised that a permissive Poland, especially 'softened-up' by imported depravity, would be a nice, easy enemy.

Whether or not this strategy was an unqualified success is open to debate but it would seem to be a knock on the head for the 'Porn is Harmless' brigade.

In all truth I find it hard to believe that any Labour man who supposedly stands for working-class interests against the evils of profiteering businessmen, could even consider appearing to show the slightest support for an industry that literally abounds with 'get rich quick' boys who are only too willing to make their fortune through degrading material that reduces human beings to the level of animals.

I am sure that the vast majority of people will agree that this country needs neither the 'porn-mongers' nor the rubbish that they peddle, and also that it is the duty of our representatives in Parliament to express the views of the very people who elected them in the first place.

Phil Hanman. (Secretary, Abbey Wood National Front).

Trouble shooting

Press 'Integrity'

An example of the dishonest lengths to which the Press will go to hide the true facts about the effects of Coloured Immigration was given by David Blundy, a Sunday Times reporter, whose feature on the West Bromwich election was published on 13th May. The text of a letter sent to the Editor of his paper by myself putting the record straight may not be published — either in recognisable form or at all, so I include it in this Spearhead column:—

"Dear Sir,

"It is easy to 'prove' anyone wrong by quoting them as saying things which they never said in the first place. It is by resort to this expedient that your reporter David Blundy attempted to 'prove' me wrong in last week's feature on the West Bromwich by-election.

"At no time did I state that there were 'more than 20,000 Immigrants in West Bromwich'. I was asked by Mr. Blundy to say how many I thought there were, and I replied: 'It is impossible to put an exact figure on it due to the habit of the Government and local authorities only classifying as Immigrants those persons born outside Britain who have been in the country for less than ten years. On the basis of my own observations and information supplied me by our local members — among whom are Health Visitors and Town Hall employees — I would be surprised if the Immigrant population constituted less than 20 per cent of the whole community.'

"It was Mr. Blundy, not I, who said: 'That would make it about 20,000.' I made no comment on his mathematics, for I had replied to his question as accurately as I felt able.

"Since the appearance of Mr. Blundy's article I have been telephoned by a number of people who inform me that about nine months to a year ago, the former Town Clerk of West Bromwich, Mr. Day, was quoted in the local press as saying that there were "more than 8,000 persons who had been born outside Britain resident in West Bromwich". His figure did not, obviously, include the children of Immigrants born here who we of the NF — and the Immigrants — class as being part of the Immigrant community.

"Since Mr. Day's information Britain has experienced the 'normal' annual influx of about 30,000 Coloured Immigrants ('legal' Immigrants); God knows how many thousands of illegal Immigrants, plus scores of thousands of Asians from Uganda.

"In view of all this, I still maintain that my assessment is very much nearer the truth than the ludicrous 'one per cent' assessment to which Mr. Blundy gave credence. One of my envelope addressers reported to me that there are 64 Immigrant voters listed as living in just four houses in the Beeches Road area. West Bromwich's Immigration problem is only 'small' in comparison to that of Smethwick or Southall.

"At no time did I state that crimes of violence were on the increase here (i.e. in West Bromwich). I simply stated that many West Bromwich voters had told me that they were worried by the incidence of muggings in certain areas of Birmingham (such as Handsworth) which are near at hand, and that they are afraid that such activities will spread to West Bromwich as the Immigrant population increases.

"I wondered why Mr. Blundy was so inattentive and took so few notes during his long interview with me. I now understand why. He was obviously wondering how he could cook up quotes (sic) to insert in an article he had already planned out."

In view of my experience with Mr. Blundy I think it will be necessary for National Front election candidates to take up Professor Shockley's habit of recording, by means of a portable tape recorder, every single verbal exchange he has with the 'gentlemen' of the press. I expect this precaution would evoke some hurt looks and shocked comments . . . but what do these sharks expect?

Nice One, Cyril

A month or so ago Mr. Cyril Smith, the Liberal M.P. for Rochdale, wrote to the Rochdale Observer an incredible screed of hate against the National Front and the British Campaign to Stop Immigration.

He accused the National Front of being a Nazi organisation and of dressing up in uniforms, suggested that it was associated with Mr. Colin Jordan's movement, and implied that it was an anti-Jewish movement which supported Hitlerian tactics against Jewish people.

The letter was so replete with lies, defamations and ludicrously inaccurate information about the NF and the B.C.S.I. — but at the same time so cunningly constructed, that my impression was that the letter had been composed for Mr. Smith by some other persons — namely the conspiratorial group of people who have been uttering lying hate propaganda against the NF for years.

I wrote to Mr. Smith, putting him right concerning the policies and tactics of the National Front, and sent a copy to the Rochdale Observer, which was duly published. At the same time Mr. Smith received a strongly worded letter from the NF's North of England Regional Organiser, Mr. Walter Barton.

As a result of these communications and publicity, Mr. Smith has written again to the Rochdale Observer in order to "withdraw unreservedly" his previous allegations against the NF. We hope this timely withdrawal came about because Mr. Smith is in every sense a Big Man, and not just because of the possibility of having to bear the additional burden of a High Court Writ in addition to that of a disreputable "research department".

NOT A FASCIST

"We are a racist organisation". Such refreshing candour is unusual, but Martin Webster, 29 years old, National Activities organiser of the National Front since 1969, is nothing if not candid. "I got tired of playing ping-pong in the Young Conservatives", he says, "and I got disillusioned with the futile nonsense of Colin Jordan's 'National Socialists'. For me, the radical nationalism of the 'National Front'."

If Webster is not ashamed of the word "racist", he is adamant that N.F. policies are not fascist. "We utterly oppose all ill-treatment of racial groups because of their race". The N.F. advocates "humane, obligatory repatriation" because it feels that the majority of immigrants can't be peacefully or beneficially assimilated. "Of course, Britain has always had immigrant minorities, and those who came here before 1942, with their dependants and relatives, are welcome to stay. It was after then that London Transport and others started to recruit and exploit immigrants as cheap labour. They did not come here for our sunny climate and the smile on our landlords' faces, but for financial reasons. We've got to give massive aid to their home countries to make them more attractive places to go back to. And we're going to have to pay higher wages to induce whites to do the jobs we've used immigrants for".

Radical, nationalist change runs through all the thinking of the N.F. They oppose the "Banksters" of international finance, and want the world's trading system radically reformed. "Each nation can finance its own trade. There's no need to go through international financiers". They condemn a United Europe (reminding us that this was Hitler's aim) and anything which diminishes the sovereignty of the Crown. At home, they support resolute action against thuggery, gangsterism and drug pushers.

His worst enemy could not call Martin Webster lazy. "We've taken on the job of educating the public. They think that Parliament is the seat of government. It's not. Each of the two main parties is responsible to an establishment which tells it what to do. Despite discrimination against us in the media, we've got through to a lot of people — for example by the 3 to 4 million leaflets we've distributed. At a ward election in Wolverhampton, in a straight fight with the Tories, we got 38 per cent of the vote — and it could have been more if the Indian community hadn't turned out to vote Tory".

Very occasionally a non-National Front newspaper publishes a fair and objective comment on the NF and its members. An instance of this is a report in Birmingham, a monthly church paper circulating in the West Midlands, by Mr. John Hunwicke. We reproduce the report for the interest of our readers, just to show that the whole of the press is not corrupt — only about 99 per-cent!

NF aims to fight 50 seats at General Election

AT A meeting of the National Front Directorate recently it was decided that the NF should aim to contest 50 seats at the next General Election.

This is far in excess of the 10 seats contested in the General Election of 1970 and considerably more than the 20 to 25 seats which were being considered a few months ago. The view of the Directorate is that, although to fight for 50 seats will involve a great challenge and much hard work, it is not beyond the National Front's capacity at the present rate of progress.

Under present laws any party contesting 50 seats or over at a General Election is entitled to make an election broadcast on television. This itself would be of obvious value to the NF, but it is only a partial consideration. However many people see the broadcast itself, the most important fact is that a figure of 50 candidates entitling the NF to make it is an undoubted milestone in British politics, representing the graduation of a party from obscurity to real political significance.

We must be realistic about the chances of our 50 candidates should we be able to enter them; the odds against even one of them getting elected the coming time round are very great. What we aim to do is to use the election as a massive public relations exercise to impress the presence of the National Front upon the country as a political alternative of potential force. The mere size of the campaign will do this, and it will be that much more emphasised if our percentage votes are at least respectable.

At the 1970 General Election our ten candidates averaged 3.6 per-cent of the total vote in the constituencies they fought, with the best percentage being 5.6 and the lowest 1.9. More recently we have obtained much better results; in the by-election at Uxbridge in December we achieved 8.2 per-cent, despite the intervention of other anti-immigration and anti-Common Market candidates; in the recent Greater London Council elections, fought in constituency size areas we obtained 7 per-cent in Harrow, 8.5 per-cent in Hayes, and an outstanding 11.5 per-cent in Feltham; over six GLC areas we averaged 6.8 per-cent, almost twice our General Election average.

What we will look for at the General Election are percentage votes which sustain this improvement. We hope to very substantially improve our national average from the previous 3.6 per-cent and to obtain among our best results percentages of 8 and over. Naturally, we will try with all the energy we can summon to do much better than even this, but these are results which are within our capacity and which, if we obtain them, will be highly encouraging. Great political victories are not won overnight, least of all in Britain; what is important is to show an upward trend.

A huge amount of work and organisation is going to have to go into this campaign. It is going to involve the printing of between one and two million election addresses for a start; it is going to require a vast amount of envelope-addressing; it is going to need no little money. Over the next few months my colleagues and I are going to be working intensively to arrange these things. We will need all the support we can get. For a start we are going to have to substantially expand our number of full-time paid workers. This has resulted in our launching of a fund for £10,000 over the next year for central purposes alone and separate from the money that we will need in each area to pay for local campaigns and deposits.

Some of the areas in which we intend to put up candidates are areas in which at the moment we do not yet have any properly constituted branches but only active groups. We must expand our membership in these areas over the next year and there is every sign that we will.

There is going to be an immense amount of work in selecting and training candidates — as well as election agents and other officials.

Full-time worker

As part of the need to expand its full-time staff in preparation for the next General Election, the National Front needs the services of a further paid worker. The job will involve a very varied range of duties, sometimes including organising work and bearing a considerable degree of responsibility.

Residence must be within daily travelling distance of headquarters at Croydon. Rate of pay will be discussed on interview. Applicants should write to: NF, 50 Pawsons Road, Croydon, CRO 2QF.

All established branches of the National Front as well as active groups will be required to assist in an election campaign somewhere. In every locality election funds must be instituted — if they are not already.

May 10th Polls

National Front candidates stood in Wolverhampton, Huddersfield and Leeds in the municipal elections of May 10th. The results were as follows:—

In the Almondbury ward of Huddersfield the NF obtained 187 votes, which represented 4.3 per-cent of the poll; in the Denton ward the NF obtained 100 votes (3.4 per-cent); in the Crossland Moor ward the NF obtained 143 votes (2.8 per-cent).

In Wolverhampton the results were: Bushbury ward: NF 160 votes (4.2 per-cent); Eastfield ward: NF 304 votes (6.4 per-cent); Park ward: NF 283 votes (3.8 per-cent); Oxley ward: NF 286 votes (4.9 per-cent); St. Peters ward: NF 242 votes (4.3 per-cent).

In Leeds the NF fought just one ward, Richmond Hill, where it obtained 314 votes (6.1 per-cent of the poll).

The Wolverhampton and Huddersfield results are rather disappointing when compared with the percentages achieved by the NF in the municipal elections on April 12th. The Leeds result, however, is encouraging for a first effort. The NF have only been active in the area for a very short time and the local group's 6.1 per-cent is a good achievement in the circumstances.

Central Fund

The National Front has launched a Central Fund for the purpose of meeting its administrative expenses in the fighting of the next General Election, in which it aims to put up 50 candidates. This fund is not to be confused with local branch funds.

Branch funds will aim to raise the required sum for the fighting of their constituency campaigns, i.e. the placing of candidates' deposits, the printing of their election literature and other general expenses.

The Central Fund is to cover the expense of administering the whole election campaign from headquarters and will include the extension of full time secretarial and organisational staff as its main item.

The Central Fund has been set a target of £10,000 a year for the next two years, starting from the 1st June 1973.

Contributions and pledges for the first year, 1973-74, have so far totalled £1,350.

We urge all supporters of the National Front to give generously so that we may raise the desired figure or at least get a substantial part of the way towards it. Contributions should be addressed to the National Front, 50 Pawsons Road, Croydon, CRO 2QF. Cheques or postal orders should be made out to National Front; No. 2 account.

Sensational Result at West Bromwich

MARTIN WEBSTER gained a truly sensational result for the National Front in the parliamentary by-election at West Bromwich on May 24th. Winning 4,789 votes, he achieved 16.2 per-cent of the poll. This is by far the highest vote, and percentage, ever achieved by a British nationalist candidate in a parliamentary election.

The result shocked political opponents throughout the whole country as a sign of the NF's spectacular progress.

Mr. Webster fought an energetic campaign in which he received magnificent support from NF sympathisers from all over the West Midlands. One of the great highlights of this campaign was an impressive march through the town in which 300 to 400 people took part, ending in a stirring meeting at a local school hall which over 400 attended and in which Mr. Webster was supported on the platform by well known NF personalities including Walter Barton and Kingsley Read from Lancashire.

At a later meeting in the town, not supported by large numbers of people from other areas, Mr. Webster attracted an audience of nearly 100. This is in sharp contrast to the meetings of other candidates where much smaller audiences were usual.

Mr. Webster fought the campaign mainly on the issues of Immigration, the Common Market and rising prices, all of which were shown to be of acute concern to the electorate. His Tory and Labour opponents tried to claim that Immigration was not a problem in the town — a fair indication of their lack of touch with the feelings of the people they purport to represent. During the campaign, the Tory candidate, Mr. David Bell, although left of centre in his party, sought to capitalise on Enoch Powell's high prestige and popularity in the area by getting Mr. Powell to speak on his behalf. When Mr. Powell refused on the grounds that he did not support Mr. Bell's pro-immigration and pro-Common Market views, many observers took this as an implied support by Mr. Powell for the National Front!

The NF was fortunate enough to obtain a fine campaign headquarters right in the centre of West Bromwich, where hundreds of local people were constantly calling to pledge their support.

Quite apart from the votes obtained, the campaign has gained a good number of new members for the NF in the area.

Although many local NF workers deserve praise for their dedicated efforts during the campaign, special mention must be made of Mr. Christopher Allsopp, the local Chairman, and Mrs. Allsopp, who offered the hospitality of their home to the candidate and to Gordon Brown, whose organising ability during the campaign was an important factor in its success.

STOP PRESS

We have just heard of the death of that great old NF fighter, Mr. James ("Pop") Scott. Available space does not permit a justified obituary here. A full tribute to Mr. Scott, together with an account of his work, will be given in the July issue.

Marches and Meetings

After the West Bromwich by-election on May 24th and the municipal elections on the 7th June, electoral activities on the part of the National Front will for the main part be concluded for the year 1973. The exception to this may be the emergence of other by-elections which it would be to the NF's advantage to fight.

Due to the attention claimed by elections, it has been impossible to give a number of other activities the priority that would be desired. The NF intends to make up for this during the later half of the year. A number of large marches and public meetings are planned for the months July to November, culminating in the now traditional Remembrance Day parade on November 11th. All NF units are advised to stand by in readiness for these events. Branches will be asked to make all possible efforts to arrange coach and car parties to get to the activities from all parts of the country.

The first major activity of this kind will be a march and meeting in Central London on Saturday, July 7th, which is advertised on page 7. We ask all branches and groups to do everything they can to make this occasion a success.

Also in the later part of the year it is intended to hold the long planned leadership training courses, in which a great many NF members have shown an interest. There will be week-end seminars over the next few months incorporating training in National Front political theory and in active operations. Seminars will be held in London for Southern members and somewhere in the Midlands or North of England for Midlands, Northern and Scottish members.

Towards the end of the year it is hoped to hold a seminar and conference over a week-end for all those taking part in the next General Election.

Tory and Labour Funk Forum with N.F.

The Conservative and Labour candidates in the West Bromwich by-election got together and arranged to hold an election forum at the Dartmouth High School, West Bromwich, in the afternoon of Tuesday 15th May. Announcing their plans at their respective press conferences on Tuesday morning, both candidates expressed their intention and desire to exclude from the forum the National Front candidate.

Mr. Webster, on hearing this information, contacted the Headmaster of the School by telephone, and asked to be included in the forum. Mr. Webster stated that he had no objection whatsoever to his opponents addressing the Sixth formers at the school during their Liberal Studies period, provided he, as a duly nominated candidate, was given the same facility. The Headmaster of the school refused to grant Mr. Webster that equal facility.

As the school comes under the jurisdiction of the local authority, and as the local authority may not grant special facilities to some candidates in an election which it does not grant to all, Mr. Webster contacted the election Acting Returning Officer, the Town Clerk, Mr. Key, and drew his attention to the matter, pointing out that he was willing — even at such short notice — to attend the forum.

Shortly afterwards Mr. Key contacted Mr. Webster to state that the forum had been cancelled. This can only mean that the persons responsible for organising the forum, and/or the two candidates who had been invited to it, had hoped to give the Tory and Labour Parties special advantages, using rate-payers' facilities, which they were determined should not be extended to Mr. Webster. By this undemocratic attitude they have denied the sixth formers of Dartmouth High School a lesson in democracy.

Out of their own mouths

Let mortals beware of words,
For with words we lie,
Can say peace
When we mean war.
Foul thought speak fair,
And promises falsely.

NF Gets Moving In Canterbury

The National Front has recently started to make a big impact in Canterbury, and it is expected that the active group there will very shortly be given official recognition as a branch.

At a meeting in the old city on May 11th an audience of about 60 were in attendance. NF Chairman John Tyndall appeared as guest speaker and gave an outline to several newcomers of the issues on which the movement opposed the present Government. During the Meeting Mr. Sidney Hooper, candidate for the Westgate ward in the local council elections, was introduced and also spoke. A lively question time followed and an excellent collection was raised. Mr. David Smith was in the chair.

Many new members were recruited as a result of the meeting.

The rise of the NF in Canterbury has got the left-wing rattled. As the city is a hotbed of leftist students, including some of the most unpleasant type, it was to be expected that the NF would meet frenzied opposition there. Several attempts have been made to intimidate the owners of premises let for NF meetings, but this has not stopped the NF group.

Canterbury NF members are particularly distinguished by their vigour in writing to local newspapers and a good deal of support has been won as a result of this.
